1. Purpose

- 1.1. To report to the IJB Finance, Audit and Scrutiny Committee on the Duty of Candour cases identified within Glasgow City Health and Social Care Partnership and the requirements for annual reporting to the Scottish Government.

2. Background

- 2.1 The Duty of Candour is a statutory requirement for health and social care organisations in Scotland, designed to promote openness, transparency, and accountability when things go wrong in the provision of care.
- 2.2 The Duty of Candour was introduced in 2018 under the Health (Tobacco, Nicotine etc. and Care) (Scotland) Act 2016, with the aim of ensuring that organisations are open and honest with patients, service users and their families when an unintended or unexpected event occurs that results in harm. The legislation requires organisations to notify those affected, offer an apology, and provide support throughout the process.
- 2.3 The duty applies not only to clinical incidents but also to any situation where the care provided results in death or significant harm, including physical or psychological injury. Its implementation is overseen by the Scottish Government and Healthcare Improvement Scotland, with annual reporting requirements for all relevant bodies.
- 2.4 Each organisation providing health and social care should also compile a monitoring process to enable annual reporting of:
 - Number of incidents
 - Degree to which duties were discharged
 - Changes in policy and procedures resulting from an incident
 - Support to staff and individuals affected
- 2.5 In August 2018, a paper was submitted to the Integration Joint Board Performance Scrutiny Committee (at the time) to provide an overview of the legal duty applying to health and social care services with effect from 1st April 2018. The paper made recommendations for future development and administration of the process.

3. Requirements

- 3.1 As an organisation delivering regulated activities, the HSCP is legally compelled to fulfil the Duty of Candour requirements. This includes ensuring all incidents are identified, investigated, and reported appropriately, and that learning from such events is disseminated to prevent recurrence.

OFFICIAL

OFFICIAL

- 3.2 The Scottish Government published revised guidance on Organisational Duty of Candour in April 2025, noting that openness and honesty should be central to the actions of those providing care to others, and at the heart of every relationship between those providing, receiving and/or experiencing treatment and care. The guidance was updated based on reviews of published annual reports, learning identified from the COVID-19 pandemic and other scenarios such as healthcare-associated infections (HAI) and incidents involving multiple people, and extensive engagement and feedback from across the health, care and social work sectors.
- 3.3 The HSCP (the 'responsible person') is subject to the organisational duty of candour as defined in section 25 of the Act. Organisations must activate the duty of candour procedure as soon as reasonably practicable after becoming aware that:
- an unintended or unexpected incident occurred in the provision of the health, care or social work service provided by the organisation as the responsible person
 - in the reasonable opinion of a registered health professional not involved in the incident:
 - that incident appears to have resulted in or could result in any of the outcomes mentioned in the Act
 - that outcome relates directly to the incident rather than to the natural course of the person's illness or underlying condition
- 3.4 A 'registered health professional' is a member of a profession as defined under section 60\(2\) of the Health Act 1999^[13]. For an incident to activate the organisational duty of candour procedure, a registered health professional must give their view on the incident, its relationship to the possible future occurrence or actual occurrence of death or harm and how the incident does not relate to the natural course of the illness or underlying conditions. The registered health professional should also detail if any additional framework is being used to support the activation of the procedure.
- 3.5 Harm may not necessarily be severe; however, duty should be assessed in cases involving the following outcomes:
- an increase in a person's treatment
 - changes to the structures of their body
 - the shortening of life expectancy
 - an impairment of the sensory, motor or intellectual functions of the person which has lasted, or is likely to last, for a continuous period of at least 28 days
 - the person is experiencing pain or psychological harm which has been, or is likely to be, experienced by the person for a continuous period of at least 28 days

OFFICIAL

3.6 When an incident that meets the Duty of Candour definition occurs, health and care providers are required to:

- Notify the person affected or their family
- Apologise
- Report
- Review related processes
- Involve the person affected or their family in the process, providing an opportunity to ask questions and offer views
- Provide a written account of the review outcome to the person and/or their family

3.7 The diagram below forms part of the 2025 Guidance, setting out the decision-making process for Duty of Candour.

3.8 The Act sets out that an organisation that provides a health, care, or social work service during a financial year must prepare an annual report. The report must include:

- Information about the number and nature of incidents to which the organisational duty of candour procedure has applied in relation to a health service, a care service, or a social work service provided by the HSCP
- An assessment of the extent to which the organisation completed the necessary steps required by the organisational duty of candour procedure
- Information about any changes to the HSCP's policies and procedures as a result of incidents to which the organisational duty of candour procedure has applied

OFFICIAL

- 3.9 The HSCP must notify Healthcare Improvement Scotland, Scottish Ministers, and the Care Inspectorate when the annual report is published.

4 Legal

- 4.1 Following the Duty of Candour process and offering an apology to an individual and/or family member/carer does not equate to an admission of liability for the HSCP.
- 4.2 Section 23\(1\) of the Act defines an 'apology' as a statement expressing sorrow or regret concerning an unintended or unexpected incident. The Act clarifies that offering an apology or undertaking any action in accordance with the organisational Duty of Candour procedure does not constitute an admission of negligence or a breach of statutory duty.

5 Duty of Candour Cases

- 5.1 Learning Reviews (LRs) are commissioned by a Multi-Agency Learning Review Panel on behalf of the Public Protection Committees and Chief Officers Group, following a significant event involving a child(ren) or adult(s) that led to harm or potential for harm. The Learning Review Panel screens cases from a range of providers and services and make recommendations as to whether a review should be undertaken. Whilst cases may be escalated from several services/organisations such as Education, Police Scotland, Scottish Children's Reporter's Administration, the third sector and NHSGGC Acute Services, a significant proportion involve Social Work Services and therefore Duty of Candour, where applicable, should be considered at the point of referral to the Learning Review Panel and again during the Review.
- 5.2 However, there was no process in place to apply Duty of Candour assessment for social work services. A review of process associated with the Learning Review Policy took place in late 2025 and it was agreed that cases would be reported from 2026 onwards where social work services are involved with service users who come to harm as described at Section 2.5 above.
- 5.3 It should be noted that, despite the absence of a formal Duty of Candour process and recording, each Learning Review commissioned involves service users and/or family members where appropriate, listening to their views and offering an apology, and identifying, sharing and implementing learning to improve services. Learning Review guidance is aligned to the expectations of The Act and sets out similar requirements of professional bodies when dealing with service users and patients who have come to harm.
- 5.4 NHS Duty of Candour cases are identified from Datix, the risk management and incident reporting system that records events that could impact patient safety, staff wellbeing and significant property issues. Where patient harm is identified in line with the criteria set out above, consideration is given to the commissioning of a Significant Adverse Event Review (SAER). Duty of Candour is considered both at the point of initial review of the incident and during the SAER investigation.

- 5.5 It should be noted that, regardless of whether Duty of Candour applies, any death, near miss or significant harm caused to a patient should result in an apology and full involvement of the patient and/or family members. Learning from initial reviews, local learning reviews and SAERs should be shared with patients and/or family members as part of closing the investigation, regardless of whether Duty of Candour applies.
- 5.6 In 2025, 81 SAERs were commissioned or reported, with a total of 20 recorded as Duty of Candour cases. In terms of categories, these include 9 patient deaths, 2 cases of treatment to prevent further harm, 5 cases of treatment has increased because of harm and 4 cases of structure of body have changed because of harm.
- 5.7 The Duty of Candour SAERs were commissioned across a range of services including Alcohol and Drug Recovery Services, Community Mental Health, District Nursing, Mental Health Inpatients, Older People's Mental Health, Community Nursing and Sexual Health Services.
- 5.8 Learning from Duty of Candour cases included:
- Improvements to staff training, including Adult Support and Protection, Sepsis and Diabetes
 - Appropriate communication between services at discharge and handovers
 - Appropriate risk management, including completion of Clinical Risk Assessment Framework for Teams (CRAFT) risk assessment and involvement of the multidisciplinary team
 - Medication safety and prescribing
 - Pressure ulcer care, including tissue viability referrals and escalation
- 5.9 Learning has led to a number of service improvements, including:
- Development of a Standard Operating Procedure for Community Mental Health Teams to identify patients who have not been reviewed within the previous 180 days and ensure they are reviewed by the appropriate multidisciplinary team.
 - Depot medication clinic guidance developed to include risk mitigation measures and an audit tool
 - Discharge guidance has been reviewed to better reflect home care requirements
 - Improved access to the CareFirst 6 case management system for mental health services used by Social Work Services
 - Training on the use of Microstrategy dashboards to monitor compliance and improve caseload management in district nursing
 - A police custody healthcare interface group was established to improve patient safety during transfers from police custody to ward settings

6 Next Steps

- 6.1 Duty of Candour responsibilities will be included in induction processes for all new and existing staff will be reminded to complete the Duty of Candour course available on Turas, developed by NES, the Scottish Social Services Council, the Care Inspectorate and Healthcare Improvement Scotland.
- 6.2 The implementation of Duty of Candour within social work Learning Review processes will be monitored through existing governance arrangements, with compliance, learning and improvement actions reported through HSCP governance structures.

2025

Introduction

The statutory Duty of Candour provisions of the Health (Tobacco, Nicotine etc. and Care) (Scotland) Act 2016 (The Act) and The Duty of Candour Procedure (Scotland) Regulations 2018 set out the procedure that organisations providing health services, care services and social work services in Scotland are required by law to follow when there has been an unintended or unexpected incident that results in death or harm (or additional treatment is required to prevent injury that would result in death or harm). The Duty of Candour (Duty of Candour) legislation became active from 01 April 2018.

Organisations are required to apologise and to meaningfully involve patients and families in a review of what happened. When the review is complete, the organisation should agree to any actions required to improve the quality of care, informed by the principles of learning and continuous improvement. They should tell the person who appears to have been harmed (or those acting on their behalf) what those actions are and when they will happen. An important part of this duty is that Glasgow City Health and Social Care Partnership provide an annual report about how the Duty of Candour is implemented in our services.

This report describes how Glasgow City Health and Social Care Partnership operated the Duty of Candour during 2025. The statutory organisational Duty of Candour has been developed to be in close alignment with the requirements of the professional Duties of Candour.

Duty of Candour means that every health and social care professional must be open and honest with patients and people using their services when something goes wrong with their treatment or care causes, or has the potential to cause, harm or distress. This means that professionals must:

- tell the patient (or, where appropriate, the patient's advocate, carer or family) when something has gone wrong
- apologise to the patient (or, where appropriate, the patient's advocate, carer or family)
- offer an appropriate remedy or support to put matters right (if possible)
- explain fully to the patient (or, where appropriate, the patient's advocate, carer or family) the short- and long-term effects of what has happened.

The organisation records and reviews whenever the patient or family was informed to ensure Glasgow City Health and Social Care Partnership fully meet the policy principles. Professionals must also be open and honest with their colleagues, employers and relevant organisations, and take part in reviews when requested. They must also be open and honest with their regulators, raising concerns where appropriate. They must support and encourage each other to be open and honest and not stop someone from raising concerns. The legislation requires that Glasgow City Health and Social Care Partnership must also publish a Duty of Candour annual report.

Glasgow City HSCP Duty of Candour Compliance

A total of 20 cases were identified from 2025. Apologies and family engagement were undertaken in all cases.

All cases were subject to a Serious Adverse Event Review (SAER) where actions are identified for improvements, actions are then monitored for implementation. SAERS remain open until all actions have been completed satisfactorily.

GCHSCP staff access training via NHS Education Scotland (NES), training platform, Turas and the NHS training platform LearnPro.
